Hi Michael,

Please see the reply from our Vice President of Content/Managing Editor:

Beth, I'm OK with allowing these to be uploaded if he properly attributes to Marietta Daily Journal. I didn't see an email address for him, so I did not respond directly.

To whom it concerns:

Can you please grant permission for me to upload a photo from an August 2006 issue of the MDJ to Wikipedia?

I am a volunteer editor of Wikipedia. I would like to upload two photos of myself from an article you wrote about me in August 2006 (see attached). These photos were taken by David Caselli for an article titled "Kennesaw high schooler helps keep city wired" by Kimberly Starks.

However, Wikipedia can only include such a photo if it is released under a Creative Commons "Attribution-ShareAlike" license or one of the similar free licenses listed at https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Wikipedia:File\_copyright\_tags/Free\_licenses.

Could you please grant permission to release these photos under the CC-BY-SA or similar license so they can be uploaded to Wikipedia?

I personally thank you for helping further Wikipedia's goal of public education and outreach; Wikipedia faces a limited availability of freely licensed media, and your time and generosity are tremendously appreciated.

Thank you,

Michael Altfield
